

With the beginning of Autumn in Maine brings with it a close to the IBS Benchrest shooting season. This past weekend was a proto-typical fall day, starting with frost on the truck windshield, progressing to a sunny low 60* F day, ending with cool clear evenings. Orland Bunker and his crew ran an efficient match highlighted by the shooting and the ever popular seashore dinner (steamer clams, lobster, corn on the cob, or steak).

Unlike last year, when the range gave up its first ever 500 scores, no shooter had a 250 after the 200 yard stage. Two shooters had the opportunity to do so going to match 5 but were unable to pull it off, with one poor soul dropping his point on his last shot. OUCH! Some of us can relate to such unkind tricks of the wind god. For the 300 yard stage, what started out as a promising warm up match proved to be otherwise. After match 1's conclusion, there were but five people out of the twenty-eight shooters that managed a 50. After match 2. there were three with Allie Euber being two of three. From there the conditions got a little rough, with some sighter shots going westward into other scoring boxes. You will see what I mean when you check out the scores. That being said, Allie shot a 250-5x with his LV rig. Outstanding just doesn't cover the performance. A clean 250 is a rare occurrence at 300 yards at Damariscotta as it had only been done 5 times previous to last year. Only two people have done it twice, and now there is one that has done it three times.

Obviously, a day as described above means a LONG day for 6x, although it also means that you are never out of the game until the final match is tallied. Even with high quality glass, the mirage and shadows were problematic in the high powered VFS class. I for one shot 4 sighters in match 5 and could not locate any of them due to the light/shadow/mirage problems. It must have been a nightmare in the 6x trying to locate those bullet holes, although the seven hunter shooter's scores were on par with the majority of the VFS scores.

Many thanks to the visitors from away. We appreciate your company and hope the hospitality was worth the time and effort to be with us. Please join us again next year.
